Welcome to our Virtual Award Program

MELISSA REMIS, DEPARTMENT HEAD

Our awards ceremony is a tradition in our Anthropology Department. This year, we have modified our celebration in light of precautions to slow the spread of the Coronavirus. We have numerous outstanding members of our community, each contributing in their own unique ways.

This year, our faculty and graduate students have received top grants and fellowships to further their research and engagement. This past year, five of our faculty won ENGAGE grants to increase scholarship in their areas of research: Risa Cromer, Andrew Flachs, Jennifer Johnson, Zoe Nyssa, Erik Otárola-Castillo. Another four faculty were nominated for college- and university-wide teaching awards: Andrew Flachs, Jennifer Johnson, Ian Lindsay, and Amanda Veile.

Our undergraduates are getting hands-on experience through internships and sharing their research. Today, we become more aware of the ways that our anthropological insights and toolkits can help us work in our communities and act as catalysts for change and good in the world. I hope that we will soon have a chance to come together again and celebrate the wonderful community we have created! Until then, keep reaching for greater heights and pulling others along with you today and tomorrow.
