REL200: Introduction to the Study of Religion

Dr. Ashley Purpura, MWF 3:30-4:20, Fall 2015, BRNG 2290, All students welcome!

Course Description: Interested in developing your abilities as a global citizen to recognize, respect, and speak with confidence about religion? This course offers an introduction to the interdisciplinary, multicultural, and academic study of religion where you are invited to reflect on religion as a cultural phenomenon and to survey the major facets of nine different religious traditions. All are welcome! *Counts towards Area A for Religious Studies Majors & Minors

Course Features:
- Field trips to Jewish, Christian, and Muslim sacred spaces
- Religiously-themed films, music, & foods
- Expert guest speakers from multiple religious traditions
- Field research opportunities to explore religion around campus
- Organized class debates on pressing social and ethical issues

Email apurpur@purdue.edu for more information!

REL200 is also part of the...

Around the World (in Global Texts and Religions) Learning Community

Open to first-time beginning students in any college/school/major

Associated Class: “ENGL/CMPL 266: World Literature”

http://www.purdue.edu/studentsuccess/orientation/learning_communities/profiles/University-wide%20LCs/around_the_world.html