Critical Disability Studies Symposium

February 18, 2016   ||  10am-3:30pm
Stewart Center, Room 214 A&B  |  Purdue University

Keynote Speaker
Rosemarie Garland-Thomson
Emory University
Department of English
Keynote: "Habitable Worlds"
10:30am

Michele Friedner
Stony Brook University
Department of Health and Rehabilitation Sciences
"Valuing Deaf Worlds in Urban India: Reorienting Disability, Deafness, and Value"
11:30am

Lunch (provided)
12:30pm

Douglas Baynton
University of Iowa
Department of History
"The Great Race of Life: Time and Disability in American History"
1:30pm

Jenifer Barclay
Washington State University
Department of Critical Culture, Gender, and Race Studies
"Laughable Limps, One-Eyed Wenches, and Cross Dressing Dwarfs: How Disability Makes Sense of Blackface Minstrelsy"
2:30pm

This symposium is hosted by the Critical Disabilities Studies Program, housed in the School of Interdisciplinary Studies in the College of Liberal Arts. We are grateful for the co-sponsorship of the Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies Program, the School of Interdisciplinary Studies, the Center for Research on Diversity and Inclusion, and the Department of English.

The symposium is part of an Emerging Research Incentive Grant entitled “Diversity and Inclusion: Implications for Science and Society,” sponsored by the Office of the Vice President for Research and awarded to Laurel Weldon, Distinguished Professor of Political Science and Director of the Policy Research Institute.

For further information, please contact Maren Linett, Department of English, at mlinett@purdue.edu.