This course focuses on how clothing provides a visual text from which political and social identities are read. We will look at how the styled and un-styled body is a source of non-verbal communication through fashion shows, advertisements, and other areas of popular culture. Essentially, this course allows for students to think critically about how America is remembered through material culture.