“Teaching and Learning at a Liberal Arts College”

Dr. Bruce Stinebrickner
DePauw University

Friday, November 7, 2014
2:30-3:20 p.m., BRNG B206

Professor Bruce Stinebrickner has been in the Department of Political Science at DePauw University since 1987. He was previously a member of the Department of Government at the University of Queensland in Brisbane, Australia (1976-1987) and of the Department of Political Science at Lehman College of the City University of New York (1974-1976). He served fourteen years as department chair at DePauw and two years as head of department at Queensland. He earned his Ph.D. (and M.Phil.) from Yale in 1974 (and 1972), and his BA magna cum laude from Georgetown in 1968. He is co-author (with Robert A. Dahl) of Modern Political Analysis, 6th edition (2003), and has served as editor of 38 annually revised editions of American Government, a book of readings used widely in introductory American politics courses. He has also edited 16 editions of a reader entitled State and Local Government. His articles have appeared in both American and Australian political science journals, and his research and teaching center on American politics, with a particular interest in public policy and state and local government.